A Few Might Survive

A few people in thinly-populated British Columbia might survive an atomic war, Vera Brittain, English author, told a Victoria audience.

"But not many of the millions in the British Isles would be left," she said.

Miss Brittain spoke in New Kirk Hall, 680 Courtney Street, under auspices of the Peace by Peaceful Means Society.

She urged her audience to seek inspiration from Gandhi, Indian independence leader, in working for peace.

Gandhi's doctrine of non-violent resistance did not mean lying down in the face of the enemy, but defeating him without shedding his blood or giving him any reason to go on hating.

Marches and demonstrations against nuclear armament are gaining support in Britain, she said.

She also recommended peace-making by negotiation, between heads of state, between unofficial groups and among ordinary citizens.

"One reason why there is so much fear of Russia is that there is so little knowledge," Miss Brittain said.

She said this ignorance could be broken down by visits and by the exchange of non-military scientific and cultural information.

Urging "personal reconciliation" as an instrument of peace, she told how Negro victims of London race riots had publicly petitioned the home secretary to reduce the prison terms of the teen-aged white hoodlums who had attacked them.

Cheque Charges Admitted

Corp. Robert J. Fullerton, PPCLI, Work Point, pleaded guilty yesterday in police court to six charges of passing forged cheques and three of false pretenses involving cashing of cheques.

Magistrate William Ostler remanded the case to Tuesday for sentencing.

Without hesitation, the soldier pleaded guilty to the charges as they were read. About $520 was involved in cheques cashed here during the last year.

Six of the charges were for uttering forged government cheques. The three other charges came from cashing personal cheques for food and money at Canada Safeway Ltd. stores.

Herman Leroy Redlin, 1157 Johnson, had bail set at $2,000 and obtained a remand to Wednesday after being charged with theft by breaking and entering Benny's Grill, 1020 Blanshard, on Thursday.

He told the magistrate he wanted bail and a remand so he could obtain counsel and prepare a defence.
